Event Overview

The Stakeholder Engagement phase of the Digital Curriculum Transformation (DCT) Project aims to actively engage teaching and learning stakeholders across the nine schools by introducing them to the project and strengthening a shared understanding of effective instructional and learning design approaches.

This phase will focus on collaborative engagement with stakeholders to analyse both selected modules and modules that have expressed interest in participating in the DCT process, with the aim of identifying priority areas for digital curriculum interventions.

Key activities during this phase include:

- Presenting selected modules and modules that have formally expressed interest for discussion and contextual analysis;
- Engaging stakeholders in identifying challenges, opportunities, and areas for targeted DCT intervention;
- Introducing the five-step Design Sprint model that will guide the curriculum transformation journey; and
- Demonstrating practical examples of module enhancements and transformations previously implemented by the Instructional and Learning Design team.

This approach is intended to build stakeholder buy-in, encourage shared ownership of the process, gather critical contextual input, and establish a clear, collaborative roadmap for the successful implementation of the Digital Curriculum Transformation project.
